Course Introduction	This course looks at the selected Intergovernmental Organisations (IGOs) from the perspective of the member states' obligations, competences and enforcement. Its aim is to answer the question whether the states around the world are able to cooperate in order to solve the global problems. Why the UN cannot stop the war in Syria? Why is the WTO perceived by some international actors as necessity while others criticise it? These and other questions will be analysed during the course exploring power and limitations of the international organisations.
