Course Introduction	For those not familiar with Southeast Asia, there is often a misconception that the region is chaotic and therefore cannot be analysed as a singular whole. This class is to dispel that misconception and will be utilising the theoretical lens of nationalism to paint a fairly unified picture of the region. It will be looking at the 'pre-modern', 'modern' as well as the contemporary periods of Southeast Asian history bringing into perspective the experiences of the region's 11 nations as they slowly evolved into modern nations
